Make plans to join us as we welcome Mr. Chris Reed as our new Minister of Music! This celebration will take place of our normal Fellowship meal, so bring your best dishes and desserts to share!

The monthly business meeting will follow.

Soup & Scripture is back on Dec 3 & 10 at 1:00pm.

Come enjoy the warmth and fellowship as we share a meal (soup prepared by the Pastor) and study scripture. Invite your friends!

One of my favorite things to do each week is to sit down and write this little article for the Valley Echo. Sure, sometimes the deadline comes before I'm ready and, true to form, I almost always wait until the last minute to start it but it is still a special time. For example, I am sitting at my window enjoying the beautiful leaves in my yard and listening to...pretty much nothing. I can hear the refrigerator running and that's about it. It is such a peaceful time of my week. It gives me a dedicated time to reflect on things I've recently done, heard or seen.

Just this morning I came across something on one of our favorite social networks on the Internet. It was a great way to teach children about how to manage their money. The concept isn't new – save, spend and share. Even the smallest child can understand the importance of these three ideas. It was a bank that was divided into 3 separate sections. Each section is equal in size. The idea is to teach the child to divide whatever money they receive three different ways. Saving might be the hardest part of this practice. It is for most of us. Eventually, though, the child will learn to love sound of money jingling in the savings section. Most children won't have unexpected expenses like adults do, but doing this really emphasizes the need to think ahead. The spending part is pretty much self-explanatory, as most of us like to have money on hand for immediate needs/wants. With a child, though, it gives them a place to collect their money so they have it when it's time to go to the store. The sharing section might be the child's favorite of the three. Most children enjoy being a "helper". They like being able to show that they care for others. This is evident whenever our children at church work to make money for Annie Armstrong or Lottie Moon. When they experience this joy as a child, the interest in giving to others generally carries on to adulthood.

By the time we are on our own as adults, we have decided how we want to manage our money and other assets. In today's economy it's easy to forget to save and share as well as spend. There are times in life where minimal living expenses use up most of what we earn. But keeping focus on these three practices – saving, spending and sharing – helps us to become good stewards of what God has given us. And don't forget, your presence is as important as your presents. God knows what we have to give and when we find ourselves a little thin on the monetary gifts we can share, we can give of our time. Both are important to God's work. And as life goes on, we generally find a different balance in what we can give and what we can do. It's called just being a good steward.
